Retired Pay Peril

Can the United States Government take away the retirement pay of a former member of the Armed Forces?

This question is being explored by the House Armed Services Committee as the result of a recent Navy action which wiped out the retirement benefits of an officer convicted of a criminal offense by

Budget Bureau Snubs SecDef Wilson's "His Pay Bill Plan Is Rejected; Try I

AN "urgent" appeal by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson for a military pay adjustment "at the earliest possible date" has been rejected by the Bureau of the Budget.

Budget Director Percival Brundage has told the Defense Secretary in succinct terms that a pay bill proposed by the Pentagon "must be weighed against the importance at this time of avoiding any additional inflationary pressures."

The Budget Bureau, referring to the wishes of President Eisenhower, advised Secretary Wilson to restrict sharply his pay proposals.

Curiously, Secretary Wilson, in a lengthy letter to the Budget Bureau, had noted that the Chief Executive, as early as last July, had been informed that a new military pay plan was being developed for the 1957 legislative program.

In a letter dated 20 March, Secretary Wilson revealed to Mr. Brundage how he had cut major recommendations of the Cordiner Committee—the Pentagon, for advocated no pay increase whatsoever for persons on retired lists—and stated:

"I feel that the cost of the proposed legislation is moderate compared to the ultimate costs which may be incurred, apart from decreased operational effectiveness, if we do not now provide means for attracting and retaining in the Armed Forces the best qualified men in the many and diverse skills required."

The Secretary said he wished to stress that his pay plan could be financed entirely from within current budget requests.

Mr. Wilson told Mr. Brundage that "the revised proposal has been worked out carefully in light of my recent discussions

Admiral Burke Outlines Plans To Build Nuclear-Powered, Missile-Equipped Navy

(Marine Atomic Weapons, P. 7)

The United States Navy of the future is described by Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, USN, in hearings released this week by the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

The Chief of Naval Operations told the committee that "missiles will be the major defense of the fleet against air attack in about the 1965-67 era."

He also said the Navy hopes "to have enough ships to form a complete task force with nuclear power by 1970."

All new submarines will be nuclear-propelled, he said, and "every new ship that is big enough" will be equipped with guided missiles.

Admiral Burke said the $10.5 billion navy budget is the minimum amount it will take to operate the Navy during the coming fiscal year. This amount, he

MISSILE TARGETS

Navy missiles are getting so good at hitting their targets that special steps have had to be taken to cut down the target loss.

Testifying before a House Appropriations subcommittee, Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, USN, Chief of Naval Operations, had this to say on the subject:

"We have surface-to-air and air-to-air guided missiles of such accuracy that it has been necessary as an economy measure, to take special precautions in target practice to reduce the number of drone targets destroyed."

All Services Join In Panama Test

A roundup story on the test begins on Page 3, where there is also a special report on how an Army major general directs operations of the vital Panama Canal.

PRESIDENT'S WISHES?

The Secretary of Defense and the Director of the Budget Bureau are in apparent disagreement regarding President Eisenhower's wishes on military pay.

Mr. Wilson thought he was carrying out the President's desire in proposing a pay bill.

Mr. Brundage says he is carrying out the President's wishes in spurning Mr. Wilson's measure.

Radical Changes Needed In Military Thinking, Marshal Montgomery Says

(Following are excerpts from the talk Field Marshal Montgomery, Deputy Supreme Allied Commander Europe, gave at a press conference following the recent NATO CPX-1 in which he sums up what the military forces may have in operation within the next ten years and what will be in the development stage by the end of that period.)

THE SHAPE indoor exercise just concluded dealt with the kind of armed forces which are likely to be needed by the NATO nations in say 1966—that is, about ten years ahead. We selected this date because we will then be in the missile age. The progress of science will then have provided us with nuclear weapons of tremendous destructive power, and with the means of delivering them. The new key to our strategy will be this power to destroy to an extent never before envisaged.

Our task at SHAPE is to protect the peoples and territories of the NATO nations against armed aggression. If we are subjected to an all-out attack by an aggressor, whether he uses nuclear weapons or not, our military plans require that we defend ourselves with all the means at our disposal, including the new nuclear weapons; this cannot be stated too clearly or too often.

It is possible that we might be subjected to limited aggression in certain areas, the aggressor not using nuclear weapons. For instance, an aggressor might want to test our firmness by seizing a portion of territory of one nation in some isolated area, hoping that our unity would not be sufficient to launch combined NATO counter action.

Such an act of aggression would constitute an invasion of NATO territory and SACEUR must have the resources and the means to permit him to deploy his NATO forces—not merely the forces of one nation—in the path of the aggressor at once. By such action we plan to handle limited aggression in the NATO area without necessarily resorting to nuclear weapons, thus trying to isolate a limited attack before it could develop into an ugly situation which might lead to unlimited nuclear war.

In this exercise we have been directing and communications with the President."

The Secretary inclosed in his communication to Mr. Brundage a proposed letter of transmittal to the Speaker of the House and President of the Senate, the draft of a pay bill, a sectional analysis of the measure and a report on costs and gains.

Chairman Ralph J. Cordiner, president of the General Electric Company, has stated that savings of up to $5 billion a year could be achieved by adoption of the new pay plan. He emphasized that the revised pay structure would be a major deterrent to inflation.

Budget Director Brundage disagreed.

"In my judgment," he advised Secretary Wilson, "the President has made clear his views that only that portion of the recommendations of the Cordiner Committee with respect to the pay structure should be considered for adoption at this time."

Then, the Budget Bureau chief added:

"It would appear that the key point for retention of enlisted personnel with critical skills is at the expiration of the first enlistment. Therefore, it would seem that adjustments should be focussed particularly at this point or that provisions for special compensation for selected persons thereafter might be appropriate."

The Budget Bureau letter commented:

"Proposals for general adjustments in levels of compensation for members of the Uniformed Services must be weighed against the importance at this time of avoiding any additional inflationary pressures.

"Accordingly it is requested that your draft of proposed legislation be reviewed and resubmitted with the adjustments limited to the areas outlined above."

MAN FOR THE JOB

The officer who heads the U. S. Army Caribbean School should be a man who is experienced in combat and who possesses a fluency in the Spanish language.

Career Management had no trouble coming up with the name of the present Commandant.

Col. Gines Gomez, USA, has won the DSC, Silver Star and Bronze Star with four clusters, as well as the Legion of Merit with cluster.

He was born in Spain, is a graduate of the University of Arizona, and attended the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., before assignment to the School a year and a half ago.

Latin American Cadets Will Attend "Goodwill" Army School In The Canal Zone

FT. GULICK
CANAL ZONE

THE U. S. Army Caribbean School, which has trained more than 6000 Latin American military men—from privates to generals—and is widely recognized as a top caliber "goodwill" activity, soon will inaugurate a new course.

Arrangements are being completed for Latin American nations to send military cadets to Ft. Gulick for 46 weeks training, which would count as their fourth year of study.

Col. Gines Gomez, USA, enthusiastic school commandant, said here during Exercise Carib-Ex that several nations already have accepted the invitation to use the USARCARIB School for the senior year's training.

Instruction will be mainly practical, with a minimum of academic instruction.

The 46-week cadet course will be the capstone for a varied program of instruction which ranges from four week basic type classes for enlisted men to 20-week classes that virtually identical to the associate courses at the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Ga., and the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans.

Colonel Gomez supervises a faculty of 34 officers and 131 enlisted men, who give instruction exclusively in Spanish. Many of the instructors are native Puerto Ricans; others are from Spanish-speaking families, largely from the Southwestern part of the United States. Each year, the School invites a number of top graduates to remain as "guest instructors."

Colonel Gomez said in an interview that "the Army is delighted that 19 nations currently have students enrolled in courses at Gulick." He noted that for the first time the Dominican Republic has sent soldiers to the USARCARIB School, which was activated in 1949.

Last year's advanced class included the Chiefs of Staff on Venezuela and Colombia; also a brigadier general from Paraguay.

Colonel Gomez said "there is no question that friendships that are made by students at the school is an important factor in building goodwill throughout Latin America."

The school's official motto: "Uno Para Todos y Todos Para Uno—One for All and All For One."

CARIBBEAN SCHOOL COMMANDANT — Col. Gines Gomez, USA, talks to a Journal reporter during Exercise Carib-Ex about the expanding program at Ft. Gulick, C. Z., where more than 1600 Latin American officers and enlisted men are trained each year. A new course for cadets opens 1 July. A much-decorated combat leader, Colonel Gomez is a native of Spain, was graduated from the University of Arizona, and attended the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., before assignment to the Canal Zone.

MDW ANNIVERSARY

The Military District of Washington, commander by Maj. Gen. John G. Van Houten, USA, celebrates its 15th anniversary. A special birthday article has been prepared for THE JOURNAL by General Van Houten and is published on Page 27 of this issue.

Next Week — —

PANAMA T.V.—During a break in the coverage of Exercise Carib-Ex in Panama (4 May), THE JOURNAL visited with Maj. John P. Morrissey, USA, who commands the Armed Forces Television Station serving Canal Zone forces—biggest of all military T.V. operations. In an area where there is no local T.V. station, Major Morrissey and his staff serve U.S. families outstandingly, also fulfill an important "goodwill mission" in bringing U.S. programs to thousands of Panamanians. The station, CFAN-TV, (for Caribbean Forces Network), celebrates its first anniversary 6 May; it will be the subject of a special on-the-spot report in next week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

SecDef's Directive Could Damage Army Aviation; Longer Missile Range Seen

DEFENSE Department weight limitations on Army aircraft—if strictly applied—will "unquestionably" prevent the Army from developing the planes it needs to fulfill its mission.

This statement is made by Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, USA, Army Chief of Research and Development, in hearings released this week by the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

General Gavin also states that the restrictions on Army aviation have given rise to "considerable doubt and misunderstanding within the aircraft industry."

He adds, "I have already sensed a decreasing interest in the Army and its aviation problems within industry. The net effect, as I evaluate it, will be that the exchange of ideas between Army and industry will tend to be stultified."

General Gavin was questioned closely by members of the committee about the effect on the Army of Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson's November directive which places restrictions both on Army aircraft and guided missiles.

General Gavin said the 100-mile limitation on surface-to-air missiles "poses no major problem" at present because there is a clear inference that the limitation will be reconsidered as advances are made in the missile field.

Regarding the 200-mile limitation on surface-to-surface missiles, he said the

ARMY IS HOPEFUL

A visit by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson to Patrick AFB, Fla., last week, where he reportedly saw a successful shoot of a Jupiter IRBM missile, has raised hopes in the Army that the Defense Department will provide additional funds for continuation of work on the 1500-mile weapon at Redstone Arsenal, Ala.

Secretary Wilson must decide whether to allocate money from his Emergency Fund for Army work on the IRBM. The Air Force, which has control of missile development beyond the 200-mile limit imposed on the Army, has not asked Congress for any Jupiter funds in the fiscal year starting 1 July.

GENERAL O. P. WEYLAND, USAF, head of TAC, Langley AFB, Va., lables news stories regarding his "imminent retirement" as being "completely unfounded." He says he will remain in his present post.

GENERAL WILLISTON B. PALMER, USA, Vice C of S, departs the Pentagon

31 May for assignment as Deputy C in C of the U. S. European Command in Paris. He replaces General George H. Decker, USA, who goes to Korea to command the U. N. Command, U. S. Forces in Korea and Eighth Army, relieving General I. D. White, who becomes Commander of U. S. Army Pacific. General Lyman L. Lemnitzer, USA, now U. N. and Far East Commander, is slated to report to the Pentagon by 1 July to take over General Palmer's post as Vice C of S, which will be filled on an "acting" basis by Lt. Gen. Carter B. Magruder, USA, Deputy C of S for Logistics.

COL. LEROY H. WATKINS, JR., USAF, Aide to Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, JCS, Chairman, is headed for assignment as a student at the National War College, Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C. Another top JCS Chairman assistant, Col. Claire Hutchin, USA, reportedly will get command of a regiment in Germany.

GENERAL LEMUEL SHEPHERD, JR., USMC, led a group from the Inter-American Defense Board, of which he is chairman, from Washington, D. C., to Panama last week for Exercise Carib-Ex.

VADM. GEORGE W. ANDERSON, JR., USN, at 50 has become the Navy's youngest three-star officer. He is C of S to Admiral Felix B. Stump, USN, C in C of the Pacific Command, which is described as "the world's largest military command."

CHARLES H. SHUFF, a WWII Air Force lieutenant colonel and Air Force Deputy Assistant Secretary for International Security Affairs from February 1952 to November 1953, will be Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs under Assistant Secretary Mansfield Sprague, with special responsibility for the Military Assistance Program. Mr. Shuff, who was Assistant to the President of the Westinghouse Corporation, succeeds E. Perkins McGuire, now Assistant Secretary of Defense for Supply and Logistics.

Canal Test And/Or Demonstration Shows Mobility Of All U. S. Services

Ft. CLAYTON
CANAL ZONE

MILITARY observers and newsmen from the United States and Latin American nations have been given a new demonstration of the mobility and striking power of Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps forces.

Carib-Ex, a joint Service operation, has shown how Armed Forces elements can move quickly and powerfully to meet enemy threats.

The exercise, which many likened to a maneuver and which, in fact, was largely a staged demonstration, was designed to show how jungle-trained troops would function if put to such a test as safeguarding control of the vital Panama Canal.

At all stages of Carib-Ex, its top commander, Lt. Gen. Robert M. Montague, who heads the joint command in the Caribbean, emphasized that the operation was essentially "a training exercise", with emphasis on amphibious and airborne operations in a jungle environment.

Scores of visiting generals and admirals from 17 Latin American nations and observers from the U. S. were impressed nonetheless with the realism of the major movements.

These included an amphibious landing by the 2d Provisional Marine Air-Ground Task Force, under Brig. Gen. Austin R.

Brunelli, USMC, a Navy Cross winner at Iwo Jima, on Wednesday.

The amphibious assault, which included

"NON-MILITARY STAFF"

Governor William E. Potter and Lieutenant Governor H. W. Schull, Jr., are aided in administration of the Canal Zone and operation of the Panama Canal by a staff which includes six other military officers.

It is stressed here, however, that these officials function as civilians. For example, Governor Potter does not report to the Chief of Staff of the Army. His line of command runs to the Board of Directors of the Panama Canal Company and to the Secretary of the Army, designated to oversee the Canal Zone operation.

The other U. S. Service officers in the Canal Zone are Col. Hugh M. Arnold, whose title is Engineer Chief, Col. Charles O. Bruce, head of the Health Bureau and Maj. David Smith, who is Military Assistant to the Governor, all of the Army.

Four Navy Captains in key Canal Zone positions are Warren S. Rodiman, head of the Marine Bureau; Anthony C. Roessler, Port Captain at Balboa; John Andrews, Jr., Port Captain at Cristobal; and Hugh S. Knerr, chief of the Industrial Division, whose assistant is Cdr. Nathan R. Fuller.

CARIB-EX INTERVIEW — Gen. Willard W. Wyman, USA, right, answers questions posed by Brig. Gen. Robert Ginsburgh, USAF-Ret., during a break in the airborne phase of Exercise Carib-Ex. General Wyman was the senior Army general officer present for the Canal Zone test; he is Commanding General of the Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe, Va. General Ginsburgh is military editor of U. S. News and World Report.

Marine Corps Cuts Four Planes From VMF/VMA Sqns.; Support Shifts To Rear

Marine Corps fighter and attack squadrons will be reduced from 24 to 20 planes under the new Table of Organization established by the Fleet Marine Force Organization and Composition Board, headed by Maj. Gen. Robert E. Hogaboom, USMC, Deputy Chief of Staff, Marine Corps Headquarters.

The reduction in the number of planes, the Marine Corps said, is being made to "meet requirements for tactical air support imposed by the 'vertical assault doctrine.'" The Board determined that 20 planes would be enough to provide "a reasonable landing force contribution to the overall offensive and defensive air support."

The cut means that fewer maintenance, supply and supporting officers and men will be needed to back up assaulting air-ground elements. The heavy service functions have been shifted to higher echelons.

The 3d Marine Air Wing, led by Maj. Gen. Thomas G. Ennis, USMC, is pioneering the new Aviation structure. The Wing is based at MCAS, El Toro, Calif.

The revised T/O calls for consolidation of the S-1 and Adjutant Sections in order to reduce the number of administrative officers and men. Although the number of fighter and attack planes is being cut on the squadron level, there is an increase from 18 to 20 in the number of aircraft to the VMCJ (Composite Reconnaissance Squadron).

On the Group level, the new T/O calls for elimination of all Exchange and Special Services personnel and a reduction of security officers and men assigned to fighter and attack units. Additional men will be assigned to helicopter groups to permit those units to operate air control teams in embarkation and landing zones during tactical and logistical air lifts.

On the Wing level one ASRT (Air Support Radar Team) has been added to the MASS (Marine Air Support Squadron). The new radar team does not call for an increase of personnel. At the same time, the Marine Wing Service Group has been given increased responsibilities in the motor transport area. The Wing Service Group supports operating Groups and Squadrons. The Wings will form

Canal Zone Squeeze, Security, Meat, Water Are Problems For Governor Potter

BALBOA HEIGHTS

MAJ. Gen. William E. Potter of the Army Corps of Engineers is a military man who lacks a military command.

He does not, however, want for intricate problems requiring a variety of decisions. These problems range from what to do about the slender size of the Panama Canal in the face of the expanding girth of warships and commercial vessels, to delicate negotiations regarding steak consumption and the price of drinking water supplied to Panamanians who live between the vast Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

As the 12th Governor of the Canal Zone and President of the Panama Canal Company, General Potter, USMA '28, who is always referred to here as "the Governor," exercises sovereign authority for the United States in an area 10 miles wide and 50 miles long—from Cristobal on the Atlantic to Balboa on the Pacific.

Governor Potter and the Lieutenant Governor, Col. H. W. Schull, Jr., USA, are responsible first and foremost for the safe and efficient operation of the vital Panama Canal, which transited 808 ships in March, a record month since its opening on 15 August 1914.

The two Army engineers are concerned because of the Canal's inability to handle all ships. Major problem is the pinch that results from the fact that the channel through the eight-mile Gaillard Pass is only 300 feet wide in some places.

IN AN INTERVIEW with newsmen who were here from the States to cover Exercise Carib-Ex, Governor Potter said detailed Canal studies show that business is likely to continue to increase. More than 46 million tons of cargo were transited last year; Canal revenue was close to $90 million (average cost per ship transit is $4000-$4500). The Governor noted also that ships continue to grow in size.

He recalled how detailed studies have been made looking to the possibility of a sea-level canal or a big lock that could handle the largest warships and commercial vessels. The Governor, a renowned engineer, said the sea-level project would probably cost about $3.5 billion, roughly $1 billion more than would be required for a canal with locks 2000 feet long and 200 feet wide.

The locks now used are 110 feet wide, big enough by 1½ feet to handle such battleships as USS Iowa.

Governor Potter said the Canal now is operated 16 hours a day—the main deterrent to a 24-hour day being the Gaillard Pass difficulty. He suggested that if an around-the-clock operation were desired, this could be achieved by lighting the canal at a cost of under $50 million.

Aside from the technical and traffic problems of the Canal, Governor Potter, Lieutenant Governor Schull and their associates currently are involved in high-level discussions on such matters as the purchase of meat and the price of drinking water.

The Republic of Panama has protested the decision to import some meat from Australia for Canal Zone families. Governor Potter explained that this action was taken to supplement Panamanian meat resources and to provide a better grade of meat that was not available locally.

As to the water issue, Panama's President Ernesto de la Guardia, interviewed separately by the visiting newsmen, said his Government thinks the Panama Canal Company is charging too much—8.7 cents per 100 cubic feet—for water that is supplied for local consumption.

Governor Potter, at 50 one of the youngest Corps of Engineer generals ever to serve in the top Canal Zone post, conceded frankly to reporters that "there are some petty squabbles between us and the people of Panama, just as there are in any family. But we are darn good neighbors."

His comments about the friendliness which exists between the people and government of Panama and the Canal Zone Government were supported strongly by statements made at the informal news conference held by President de la Guardia after the first phase of Carib-Ex was completed.

The President denied emphatically that he was in favor of nationalization of the Canal, said he did not think any changes were necessary in treaty arrangements between his country and the U.S., and added that "Governor Potter has been very cooperative. Our relations are excellent—probably better than ever before," said the President in answering questions about published reports of his alleged dissatisfaction with current arrangements.

U. S. Army

Family Care

Dependent parents and parents-in-law may live apart from Servicemen and still be eligible for medical care at service hospitals.

Before 18 April, the Dependent's Medical Care Act was interpreted to mean that a dependent parent must actually reside in the same domicile as the Service sponsor.

A new Department of Defense interpretation states: "The requirement of actually residing in the household shall be fulfilled when the parent or parent-in-law actually resides, or was residing at the time of death of a member or retired member, in a dwelling place provided or maintained by said member or retired member."

This means that if a Serviceman provides or maintains a place of residence for his dependent father or mother, regardless of its location, they may receive medical care at Service facilities.

The Defense Department emphasizes, however, that these dependents do not qualify for treatment in civilian hospitals or by civilian physicians under the Dependent Medical Care Program.

Army Tells Details Of Atomic-R&D Plan; Will Project Officer Needs Five Years

(Army officials have made available to THE JOURNAL the following prospectus on specialization training for the Atomic Energy-Research and Development Program. This report tells of opportunities that will be available to qualified officers in this field.)

THE Army's appreciation of technological developments in an atomic age has been demonstrated by a recent announcement which offers careers to selected officers who are qualified for entry into its Atomic Energy and Research and Development Program.

By offering highly attractive opportunities for graduate degrees and a progressive pattern of increasingly important technical assignments to many of its best officers it seeks to emphasize the importance of this field to the Army, and at the same time has assured those capable of meeting the program's exacting requirements that they will receive equal consideration for professional advancement with their contemporaries in more conventional activities.

ATOMIC ENERGY, as a specialized career field for officers, was adopted early in 1953. The next year the Army offered its officers opportunity for repeated assignments in its burgeoning Research and Development Program.

Female Voice (Automatic) Will Talk Army Pilots Into Air Field At Ft. Huachuca, Ariz.

The female tones of the talking beacon, which have guided light plane pilots into Teterboro, N. J. for the past two weeks, will next be heard by Army Corps pilots at the Army Electronics Proving Ground, Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., where it has been shipped for active duty.

Placed under public test demonstration by the maker, Air Associates, on 1 April, the unique guidance system is estimated to have "steered" several hundred light planes to landings on Teterboro's air strips. The planes were able to use the beacon with no more expensive equipment than a receiver and a compass.

The talking beacon, using a recorded women's voice, broadcast headings to planes located at any point of the compass. A pilot tuned in at any one point would hear his own heading to the airport every 15 seconds. The beacon is composed of electronic equipment, housed in a portable shelter which supports rotating antennae.

Packing of the beacon consisted merely of stowing the "bedspring" antennae inside the bright orange box-shaped shelter and hoisting it aboard a truck. At Ft. Huachuca it will take only three hours to get it into operation. This will consist of lifting the beacon from its truck, placing it adjacent to the runways and attaching the antennae.

Army Adopts T-44, Spurs Belgian Rifle

The Army has rejected the Belgian rifle and adopted the T-44 rifle as its basic Infantry weapon.

The T-44, which has been under test since 1952, was developed by U. S. Army Ordnance at the Springfield Arsenal. It is capable of automatic or semi-automatic fire.

The Army said it will request appropriations for the new rifle in the fiscal 1959 budget, and hopes to begin issuing it in 1960.

Adoption of the T-44, coupled with the recent adoption of the M-60 General Purpose Machine Gun, reduces the family of Infantry small arms from seven to two. Both the M-60 and the T-44 fire the 7.62 NATO cartridge.

The new weapon will replace the standard M-1 (Garand); the Browning automatic rifle, known as the BAR; the .30 calibre carbines, and the M-3 sub-machine gun.

There are two barrels for the new rifle. When the lighter barrel is used, the rifle weighs 8.7 pounds and is called the M-14. When equipped with the heavy barrel and tripod, it weighs 13 pounds and is designated M-15.

The Army rejected the experimental "T-48" Belgian rifle in favor of the T-44 because it is a pound lighter and better suited to mass production, the Pentagon said.

Man's electro-mechanical partners are bringing his ideas to life faster...better...at less cost

Today one of industry's most formidable tasks is to streamline and shorten the time-consuming process that transforms ideas into exciting new products.

Never in man's history has this embryonic period needed to be shortened more than now—when technological superiority could very well be the world's best hope for peace.

And nowhere is this challenge being met more energetically than in the development and production of automatic control systems at AUTONETICS. For instance, Numill—a new automatic machine-tool system invented by AUTONETICS—often turns the engineer's rough sketch and mathematical notations into prototype parts more rapidly than he could reach the blueprint stage with previous methods.

Standardized "postage-stamp" circuits allow engineers to mockup even highly advanced designs almost as simply as they would plug in an electric shaver. And AUTONETICS' data processing equipment can simulate a wide range of operational missions, as well as solve the most involved mathematical problems in minutes instead of days.

AUTONETICS' ability to save time and money between concept and product delivery is reflected in every area of its electro-mechanical technology: flight controls, inertial navigation, armament controls, computers, and other complete systems for the military and industry.

For detailed information, write AUTONETICS, Dept. J-73, 9150 E. Imperial Highway, Downey, California.

U. S. Navy and U. S. Marine Corps

VAdm. Curts Named For Four-Star Rank

President Eisenhower this week nominated VAdm. Maurice E. Curts, USN, Deputy Commander in Chief, U. S. Pacific Fleet, for promotion to four-star rank.

The Navy said Admiral Curts will continue in his present billet, which has been up-graded to reflect increased responsibilities.

This marks the second time in the last two weeks that the Navy has up-graded a billet in the CinCPac structure. VAdm. George W. Anderson, Jr., USN, Chief of Staff, Joint Staff, CinCPac, was promoted to three-star rank to continue in that post.

The new four-star post will give the Navy eight full Admirals, counting Admiral Arthur W. Radford, USN, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Authority for the increased number of Admirals is contained in the "national emergency" powers of the Officer Personnel Act. In peacetime, the Navy is permitted to have only four Admirals, not counting the JCS Chairman, if that post is occupied by a Naval Officer.

Admiral Curts, who has been serving in his present post since June 1955, is 59 and has 38 years of Naval service.

Cdr. Powers In CONAD Post

Cdr. George Philip Powers, USN, has been assigned to Naval Forces, Central CONAD Region, Richards-Gebaur AFB, Mo. He assumed duties as Assistant Commander of Naval Forces in the Central CONAD Region which covers all or part of 19 states.

CAPT. SLADE CUTTER HEADS USNA ATHLETICS

Capt. Slade D. Cutter, USN, has been assigned to the U. S. Naval Academy as Director of Athletics to succeed Capt. Elliott Loughlin, USN, in mid-August. Captain Cutter is Commanding Officer of Submarine Squadron Six based in Norfolk, Va. Captain Loughlin, who will complete three years of duty as the Director of Athletics in August, has been assigned as Commanding Officer of the USS Mississinewa, one of the Navy's largest tankers. He is due to report to his duty station on 26 August. The Mississinewa's home port is Naples, Italy.

Captain Cutter, whose greatest athletic achievement as a midshipman was a 20-yard field goal which beat Army 3-0 in the 1934 Army-Navy football game, was graduated from the Naval Academy in the Class of '35. He won three letters each in football and boxing and two more in lacrosse.

The Navy's new athletic director owns one of the Navy's most distinguished WWII records. His submarines accounted for 19 enemy ships and his list of service decorations include the Navy Cross; gold stars in lieu of second, third and fourth Navy Crosses; and Silver Star, and the Presidential Unit Citation for "extraordinary heroism" as commander of the submarine Seahorse in patrols against Japanese shipping and warships.

Turbo-Cat Shoots Swift Planes Into Air From Short Fields; Developed For USMC

A new method of launching high-speed planes from short airfields has been developed for Marine Aviation during the early stages of amphibious operations.

The new system recently was demonstrated at All American Engineering Company's test facility, Georgetown, Del., where piston engine and jet planes were launched from the world's first turbine powered catapult.

The turbo-catapult, powered by six jet engines arranged in a circle, develops 60,000 horsepower and shoots planes into the air in less than one-fifth of their normal take-off runs. The jet exhaust gases flow into central launching turbines which drive a drum cable system mounted on the same drive shaft. The jet engines are set at predetermined rpm's; the flow of gas is actuated and diverts the mass flow of gases into one of the launching turbines which supplies power to the aircraft through the drum cable system. The drum cable system drives a shuttle in a track in the runway. The aircraft is attached to the shuttle by a bridle similar to those used aboard carriers.

Among the advantages of the turbo-catapult over the steam catapult and other land-based launching equipment is the fact that the new system weighs only one-fifth as much as a steam catapult and the fact that it is easily dismantled and air transportable.

In addition, it can be maintained by jet mechanics who already have been trained and is economical since it uses readily available jet fuel or low grade gasoline.

First pilot to be propelled into the air from the turbo cat was LCdr. Joseph Barkley, USNR, Executive Officer, Fighter Squadron 936, NAS Willow Grove, Philadelphia, Pa. He made the first flight as an AAE test pilot, flying an AD-4NA.

The first jet, an F2H2 Banshee twin-jet, to be launched from the turbo-cat was flown by David F. McCallister, Chief, Engineering Flight Test for All American. He is also Commander of the Delaware Air National Guard's Sabrejet interceptor squadron.

The system was invented by Donald B. Doolittle, Vice President of All American. The development work was headed by Raymond B. Janney, II, Chief Engineer, and Sammie G. Keahey, Director of All American's Launching Section.

Navy Develops New TV Screen; 3-D Tube Seen

A new television screen, expected to lead the way to three-dimensional color viewing, has been developed by the Naval Research Laboratory.

The NRL screen offers a simplified approach to color television and permits viewing in broad daylight with little loss of contrast.

The basis for the new screen is a process for depositing phosphor on the face of the tube in the form of thin transparent films in place of opaque white powders now used. The films are more rugged than powdered screens, can be made brighter because they do not burn out as easily, and present a much sharper image. The improved daylight viewing of black and white pictures is a result of the improved contrast obtained with transparent films. The powdered surface in present tubes is a good reflector and in strong sunlight the reflection is brighter than the picture. In the new screen, sunlight passes through the film and is lost in the darkened interior of the tube.

Work on the project began as part of an Office of Naval Research program to simplify aircraft instruments. Part of the program involves replacement of the windshield with a thin transparent display medium. This will enable the pilot to receive visual and electronic information at the same time and in the same spot. An interim program will be to install a flat transparent TV tube just inside the wind screen.

After observing the process, developed by Dr. Charles Feldman of NRL, several television companies have indicated that they immediately will initiate development programs in their own laboratories.

L/G Pepper Retires; USMC Shuffles Posts

Maj. Gen. George F. Good, Jr., USMC, Commanding General, Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, Calif., has succeeded Lt. Gen. Robert H. Pepper, USMC, as Commanding General, Department of the Pacific, with Headquarters at San Francisco, Calif.

General Pepper donned his third star at retirement ceremonies held on 30 April. He relinquished his collateral duties as Director, 12th Marine Corps and Recruitment District, to Col. Russell E. Honsowetz, USMC, Deputy Director of the District.

At the same time, Brig. Gen. Thomas G. Ennis, USMC, was advanced to two-star rank, while Col. Sidney S. Wade, USMC, put on one star.

General Ennis, Commanding General, 3rd Marine Aircraft Wing, MCAS El Toro, Calif., remains in his present post. General Wade, on duty with the Navy Department in Washington, D.C., soon will be detached from those duties and will take command of Force Troops, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, with Headquarters at Camp Lejeune, N. C.

General Pepper was born on 22 April 1895. He was commissioned a 2d lieutenant in the Marine Corps following his graduation from the University of Delaware in 1917. He is married to the former Mildred Liebermann of Washington, D. C.

T/Sgt. Hill Leads USMC To Sweep Of NRA Shoot

T/Sgt. James E. Hill, USMC, a member of the Marksman Training Unit at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif., took top honors as Grand Champion of the 1957 National Rifle Association Regional South Pacific States Rifle Matches.

During the three-day meet, which was conducted at Camp Roberts, Calif., Sergeant Hill poured in an aggregate of 496 (with 51 V's) out of a possible 500 points. For his achievement he was awarded a sterling silver pitcher and trophy award.

In the team match on the final day of the matches, the Marine Corps "Red" squad dropped only 15 points as they shot a 985 out of a possible 1,000. The team, led by Capt. Lemoine Cox, USMC, placed 124 shots in the V-circle. Other members of the team were: T/Sgt. William Dines, USMC, team coach, CWO Thomas Carpenter, USMC, and T/Sgt. V. D. Mitchell, USMC.

The matches were sponsored by the Sixth Army and were under direction of the Fifth Division. Brig. Gen. John D. F. Phillips, USA, Commanding General, 5th Division Artillery, Fort Ord, Calif., presented the awards to the winners.

Marines Are Ready With Atomic Weapons

The Marine Corps' three divisions and three air wings are "now equipped with a variety of atomic weapons."

This statement was made by former Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas in hearings released this week by the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

General Randolph McC Pate, USMC, Commandant of the Marine Corps, told the committee he thinks the Corps "could do a pretty good job atomically right now."

He said the Marines have one battery of Honest John rockets in commission now and will have another "in the coming year." He said "Ultimately we hope to have six."

The Marine Corps is asking for a budget of $94 million for fiscal '58.

General Pate said the Corps will maintain its force of about 200,000 men through 30 June 1958.

Discussing plans to reorganize the Marine divisions and air wings (THE JOURNAL, 27 April), the Commandant said "the changeover will be gradual and calculated in the light of many factors."

"Our divisions will be more lightly equipped, more mobile and, despite this, more powerful than our present divisions. The wings will undergo certain changes also. All signs point to lighter, smaller, faster, self sufficient units."

He said the new troop organization also will call for "new equipment." However, in the initial changeover, he said, the Corps will use presently available equipment. Meanwhile, procurement will be cut back until the new material requirements are fully determined.

Blue Angels Get F11F-1s

The Blue Angels, the Navy's precision flying team headed by Comdr. Ed Holley, have switched to Grumman F11F-1 Tiger jet fighters. They previously flew Grumman Cougars.

C-124s Drop Cats Near Pole; To Build Air Strip

The Air Force has located a floating ice cake near the North Pole and airdropped initial equipment for the establishment of an Arctic observatory in connection with International Geophysical Year activities during the next eighteen months, Maj. Gen. James H. Davies, USAF, Commander, Alaskan Air Command, announces.

Two Douglas C-124 Globemasters of the 18th Air Force flew over the frigid, isolated region, 600 miles north of Point Barrow, and parachuted a 16,000 pound D-4 Caterpillar and smaller tractor type weasel onto the rugged terrain. The equipment will be used to build an airstrip where these giant cargo carriers can land with hundreds of tons of delicate instruments to be used by scientists.

Three Arctic specialists were flown out from Point Barrow in a ski-equipped Douglas C-47 and landed between the treacherous pressure ridges on the ice floes. They will handle the heavy equipment dropped by the C-124s.

The landing area has been dubbed "Jenkins' Find" after Capt. Burton P. Jenkins, USAF, who discovered it after long cruising in a C-47.

Heads 340th Refueling Sq

Lt. Col. Robert H. Langdale, USAF, has replaced Lt. Col. Arthur J. Thompson, Jr., USAF, as Commander of the 340th Air Refueling Squadron, Whiteman AFB, Mo. His previous assignment was with the 7227 Support Group, Udine, Italy.

AF's Youngest General Lives in Wash., D. C.

Brig. Gen. Richard C. Sanders, USAF-Ret., who holds the distinction of having been the youngest general officer in the Air Force, is now living at 5915 Gloster Road, Washington 16, D. C.

THE JOURNAL, through information furnished it by the Air Force, erroneously identified, in its issue of 20 April 1957, the Air Force's youngest General as "the late Brig. Gen. Richard C. Sanders."

General Sanders was born in Utah 19 Aug. 1915 and graduated from the University of Utah in 1937. The next year he entered the Service as a flying cadet and was appointed a second lieutenant in the Regular Army Air Corps 1 July 1940. He had previously served as a second lieutenant of the Field Artillery Reserve.

His rise in the Army of the United States was rapid. He made first lieutenant 10 Oct. 1941, captain 1 Feb. 1942, major 1 March 1942, lieutenant colonel 1 Feb. 1944 and brigadier general on 1 June 1944 at the age of 28 years. After the war he reverted to the rank of colonel AUS.

He was retired with the rank of brigadier general on 31 July 1950 for permanent disability incurred in line of duty.

General Sanders holds the Distinguished Service Medal, the Distinguished Flying Cross with Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Air Medal.

Helicopter Reconnaissance Squadrons as air counterparts the Division-level Reconnaissance Battalions. (A story telling of the revamped Division structure appeared in the 27 April JOURNAL, page seven.)

The structural changes in the composition of the Corps' Air Arm will have no appreciable effect on manpower levels. Wings will continue to operate with approximately 9,000 men.

The Marine Corps now employs three Sikorsky helicopters in implementing the vertical assault doctrine. Ultimately, the Corps hopes to have all three Wings equipped with the HR2S which carries two squads of combat-equipped Leathernecks. The immediate goal is to obtain HR2S's to land two Regiments (four Battalions) in the first wave of an assault.

simulated use of atomic weapons, had as additional top commanders Col. James R. Anderson, USMC, a Marine Corps aviator, as Chief of Staff; Col. J. T. Colley, USMC, commander of the 8th Marine Regiment; and Col. J. R. Bailey, USMC, Commander of the Provisional Marine Aircraft Group.

THE MARINES struck through the surf in the opening phase of the exercise, then demonstrated the "vertical envelopment" amphibious assault by helicopters later in the morning in landing near the Gatun Locks.

The amphibious landings were made from a Naval force of 23 ships of Amphibious Group Four under Rear Adm. W. K. Romoser, USN. Major ship participating was the USS Leyte under Capt. M. T. Martin, USN, with Capt. W. M. Foster, USN, commanding Destroyer Squadron 24, the Screen and Fire Support Unit, and Capt. J. H. Howard, USN, in command of the Transport Amphibious Unit.

In addition to the valuable training lessons, Carib-Ex was marked by the presence of prominent Latin American civilian and military leaders, including President Ernesto de la Guardia, of Panama, who watched from historic Ft. San Lorenzo, famous in the days of buccaneer Sir Henry Morgan, as the Marines landed on Pina Beach.

THE AMPHIBIOUS OPERATION included participation of elements from the Tactical Air Command, which sent Martin B-57 bombers in strikes against beachhead positions and which deployed four North American F-100C Super Sabres from Foster AFB, Tex., in a non-stop flight. The F-100's were diverted at the last moment from the landing area to hit secondary targets near Gatun, returning nonstop to Foster, a total distance of about 4000 miles.

The F-100's and the B-57's were rushed into action during the final phase of the Exercise on Friday at Rio Hato when a linkup was made between the Second Battalion Combat Team, 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment of the 82d Airborne Division from Ft. Bragg, N. C., and Task Force Hightower, led by Brig. Gen. Louis V. Hightower, USA, Deputy Chief of Staff, U. S. Army Caribbean.

THE PARATROOPERS were led by Lt. Col. M. H. Parson, USA, battalion commander. Also jumping with the troops in a brilliantly staged airdrop from Fairchild C-119's, with later reinforcement by Fairchild C-123's was Col. Charles Gettys, USA, regimental commander.

The C-123's brought to the Drop Zone troops from the Second Reinforced Battalion of the 20th Infantry Regiment at Ft. Kobbe, C. Z. These units were under Lt. Col. J. C. Brink, USA.

Commander of TAC's Composite Air Strike Force was Brig. Gen. Edwin S. Chickering, USAF, who leads the 405th Fighter-Bomber Wing, Langley AFB, Va. MAJ. GEN. TRUMAN H. LONDON, USAF, Commander of the Caribbean Air Command, directed Air Force participation.

At the conclusion of the Exercise, newsmen heard Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, tell General London that he was "particularly impressed" with the demonstration of tactical airpower, notably the ability of the F-100's to fly nonstop, by means of aerial refueling, from Texas to the Canal Zone and back.

Admiral Radford also congratulated General Montague on the "outstanding exercise" and told the Latin American visitors that it is "through the efforts of the military men of the Americas that we will maintain the solidarity and security of our republics."

Among the top-ranking observers here from the United States were General Willard W. Wyman, USA, head of the Continental Army Command, and General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., USMC-Ret., head of the Inter-American Defense Board.

1000 Hours In B-52

Maj. Donald Prieve, USAF, 4017th Combat Crew Training Squadron instructor-pilot, emerged jauntily from his B-52 at Castle AFB, Calif. recently to receive the personal congratulations of his commander, Brig. Gen. William E. Eubank, Jr., USAF.

A Senior Pilot with 6,500 hours of flying time, Major Prieve had just become the first man in the Air Force to chalk up 1000 hours in SAC's newest bomber, the B-52.

Major Prieve lives in Atwater, Calif. with his wife, Blanche, and two daughters, Donna Sue, 10, and Denise Gail, 3.

ITEM WOULD BE IT
AND THIS IS THE TIME TO BUY IT

—and for these reasons . . . Sales of the company here represented are now 477% of the figure six years ago. Its products are semi-monopolistic and sell to the hungry Aviation Equipment Industry. The use of all of its products is repetitive like phone calls or Coca-Cola. Cash dividends have been increased in 7 of the last 8 years. Assets are more than 12 times those of 1947.

WE DO NOT APOLOGIZE FOR OUR CLIENTS' SUCCESS IN IT

Yes, if it were suddenly decreed that each Stock-Market analyst could recommend only one LOW-PRICED stock to conservative investors who desired the rich increment practically forced upon them by the tempo of the American Aircraft industry, we would choose and name for you the one stock we are talking about here.

In buying this great investment, you must know that its inner financial arrangements are perfect and we have officially recommended this stock on several occasions, summing up to a 100% profit in 8 months.

Our next and current purchase level will be named for respondents to this advertisement. It was first advised at a price equivalent to 16.0 based on present quotations, and in the succeeding six months moved up over 50% in price.

Now, this virile stock is prepared to rise again, and it should soon show a similar gratifying gain on our new advice to you at this time.

The management has brains. We feel that the record already made will be duplicated over a succeeding 5-year period of time. We are willing to anchor this recommendation to the foundation of any investment account whatsoever, and to place this stock alongside any of the great growth stocks which have made this Bull Market so great.

ESTABLISHED 1923

85 Westminster Street, Providence, R. I.

Bureau of the Budget Balks. The Director of the Bureau of the Budget, in rejecting the Secretary of Defense's legislative proposals to implement the Cordiner Pay Report, is placing his judgment on military matters above what Mr. Wilson reported to be not only his own views but the "unanimous opinion" of the Secretaries of the Military Departments, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Chiefs of Staff of the Army and Air Force, the Chief of Naval Operations, and the Commandant of the Marine Corps.

It would appear, too, that he is placing his judgment above that of President Eisenhower who has at least twice discussed the proposals with his Secretary of Defense and at least tacitly given his assent to Mr. Wilson's announced plans for a comprehensive military pay adjustment.

The Budget Director lays down the theory that the key point for retention of enlisted personnel with critical skills is at the expiration of their first enlistment, while for officers it is the expiration of their period of obligated service, and that any adjustments must be focussed solely at these points.

This is not the view of the distinguished members of the Cordiner Pay Committee after their months of exhaustive studies in Washington and in the field. The system they recommend, upon the basis of their long and successful experience in business and industry, offers pay incentives along the line—it gives officers and enlisted personnel something to look forward to at each period of their careers, something to work for.

The strange conclusions of the Budget Director, limiting pay incentives to one single point in each enlisted man and officer's career apparently are his own ideas or those of his staff. He says the President has indicated that pay adjustments "should be limited to those directly affecting the retention of the hard-to-train skilled personnel who have been leaving the Services at an undesirable rate." That, in fact, is what the entire Cordiner report is aimed at, and the Budget Director's interpretation of the President's attitude does not square with that of the Cordiner members nor the civilian and military chiefs of the Armed Forces.

Mr. Brundage's attitude is the more incomprehensible in light of the fact that Secretary Wilson already had trimmed the recommendations severely before submitting them to the Bureau. He had stricken out entirely any pay relief to the Retired list, saying that "increased retired pay is not considered a part of the solution to the problem of developing and maintaining a quality work force balanced by skills." Yet none can doubt that the right to retirement and retired pay are among the strongest career incentives the Services have.

Mr. Wilson also had scaled down the pay of top level military officers in spite of the Cordiner group's sharp comments on previous pay revisions which have always kept the upper grade officers' increases at a minimum leading to what they referred to as a "compression" of the pay scales.

Mr. Wilson, in fact, was so sparing in what he offered the Budget Bureau that he was able to stress that if the proposed measures were put into effect on 1 Jan. 1958, the Department could absorb the cost of the first six months so that no additional money would be needed this year.

There is one ray of hope, though it be slim indeed. That is that the Bureau of the Budget's watered-down plan be sent to Congress, hearings initiated, and then the Committees broaden their scope to consider the plan in its entirety. So many members of the Committees understand the need so thoroughly and are so well informed

Officers With "Fire"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

You might call this a thesis on the difference between "old" colonels and "young" colonels. I think that it is typical in the Army, although I did not give it much consideration until a few years ago, while in an important overseas headquarters which had a number of "old" and "young" colonels. The "young" colonels had all the important jobs, while the "old" colonels held relatively minor posts. In several instances, the "old" colonels were not even fulfilling their responsibilities, but allowed their deputies to do the things that they, as the chiefs, should be doing.

A closer study revealed that all of the "young" colonels had a definite quality missing in their older contemporaries. For want of a better word, I'm calling it the "fire." Every one of the "young" colonels had the "fire." None of the "old" colonels did.

That the "fire" is the reason that the "young" colonels had all the good jobs is probably the truth, but I submit that this is only looking at the situation superficially. Why did the "old" colonels lack the "fire"? Take a representative group of young captains, and you will find that, with a few exceptions, all of them have the "fire."

I believe that you can equate the "fire" to ambition. The "young" colonels had ambition, and had the "fire." The "old" colonels had lost both.

What happens when you finally realize that you can progress no further in your chosen career? What happened to these "old" colonels when they realized that they would never be generals?

It is obvious, I think, that although our present promotion system is the best that can be devised, it is still a human device, and far from perfect. These "old" colonels were all fine officers once or they would never have progressed as far as they did, and surely many of them were equal in ability to those who continued up the promotion ladder. But only a small fraction can ever get stars.

The Army is losing out, however, if those officers who failed to make the grade now begin to lose their "fire." But how can they continue their best effort after their ambition has been swept away? I am not talking about a thing of the will at all—this is all bound up in plain psychology.

I confess I don't know the answer.

their countries some time ago. The Martin B-57 Night Intruder likewise made a deep impression upon them, as did the Fairchild C-123 assault aircraft, whose short take-off and landing capabilities made a special appeal. An airdrop of a battalion of the 82d Airborne Division from Fairchild C-119 Flying Boxcars resupplied by C-123s gave the visitors a conception of this type of warfare, particularly useful in their territories. Also appealing to them was the Marine Corps' demonstration of vertical envelopment, assault troops coming in by helicopter over a beachhead from a carrier offshore.

Modern warfare is difficult to simulate realistically, and it must be admitted that CARIB-EX lacked some of the punch which characterized the earlier use of conventional weapons. But it performed a most useful function in bringing all the Services together in a cooperative exercise and also will be a most effective support to our diplomacy below the Rio Grande.

QUOTES FROM THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (3 May 1947)—The Navy Department sent to Congress this week the draft of a bill paralleling that of the War Department providing for $100 monthly additional pay for doctors with 25 per cent extra pay for medical and surgical specialists. The extra compensation would be paid to each officer of the Medical Corps now on active duty or who transfers to the Regular Navy or volunteers for extended active duty during the next five years.

50 Years Ago (4 May 1907)—(extract from an enlisted man's letter to THE JOURNAL) "Those in authority are troubled over the refusal of soldiers to re-enlist in the U. S. Army. Why should they when every firm and railroad is offering all kinds of inducements to discharged soldiers with 'excellent character'? Why should they remain in the Army when they can get work in any city in the United States, either on the police force, fire department, or street railways with pay from $60 to $100 a month? That is something of an improvement over $13 per."

90 Years Ago (4 May 1967)—The Board which was to report upon League Island has reported favorably, and that splendid possession, the gem of the Delaware, is accordingly annexed to the United States. The gift from bountiful Philadelphia has long been pressed upon the Government, but Congress was so coy that extraordinary persuasion had to be used last Winter to induce acceptance of the treasure.

I am sure that it would take a committee of really high-caliber people to work out a solution.

But this problem does exist, and I am anxious to have it solved. I won't be too long before I, too, am at the crossroads. And if I am to be an "old" colonel I want to be a good "old" colonel. I want to keep the "fire," but I may need a little help.

Retired Pay Right

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It seems to me a dangerous precedent is being set by the Navy's action in taking away the retirement rights of an officer who has been sentenced for a civilian crime. I am under the belief that retired pay is a right that is won in recognition of past service.

What a blow it must be to the officer's family to have the pay on which they counted so many years stopped abruptly. My feeling is that if such action is to be taken, the Services should be required to lay down strict rules. For example: suppose an officer is convicted of manslaughter in an automobile case. Should he lose his retirement?

Army Navy Air Force Journal 11
4 May 1957 (Vol. 94, P. 1067)

THE following are the texts of letters exchanged between Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson and Budget Bureau Director Percival Brundage on the matter of a military pay adjustment. Mr. Wilson says there is "urgent" need for a new military pay structure. The Budget Chief comments that the Secretary's plan must be changed to avoid "any additional inflationary pressures."

Dear Mr. Brundage:

Transmitted herewith is a draft of proposed legislation "To change the method of computing basic pay for members of the uniformed services, to provide term retention contracts for reserve officers, and for other purposes" (DOD 85-180) which I desire to include in the Legislative Program for the Department of Defense for 1957.

The need for effecting a fundamental modification of the present pay structure of the Armed Forces is an urgent one which requires Congressional examination and action at the earliest possible date. It is for this reason that I request clearance of this proposed legislation as soon as possible.

The legislation is based on recommendations to me of the Defense Advisory Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation. Previously, in a letter to the President of July 14, 1956, submitting the Department's legislative program for 1957, I stated the probability that from the work of the Committee some legislative proposals would result which we would desire to include in our program.

Integrated Program

I would emphasize that the proposed legislation is an essential part of an integrated program contemplated by the Department of Defense to achieve and maintain the necessary quality, experience level, and optimum balance by skills of personnel in the Armed Forces. Included in this program is the establishment of a system for proficiency pay equivalent to one or two pay grade advancements to enlisted men who can qualify therefor by demonstrated high quality performance of duty. The proficiency pay system can be established under existing law. However, successful and equitable operation thereof is not possible unless there is first established the proper number of enlisted pay grades and pay differentials between grades as provided in the proposed legislation. Likewise, an essential part of the contemplated program which is contained in the proposed legislation is to provide additional incentive for selected reserve officers to remain on active duty beyond the period of obligated service to meet the requirements of the military services.

Dual Problem

The Department recognizes that there exists a dual problem of encouraging personnel retention on one hand, and controlling it on the other. The Department of Defense must and will meet this problem by instituting concrete "personnel control" procedures. Among the measures which will be instituted are more effective controls on reenlistments (to insure that only those personnel are reenlisted who can make an effective contribution to the force), increased and continuing emphasis on conversion or retraining of personnel who are in excess of requirements in the less technical occupational specialties; and selection-out of officers whose duty performance does not measure up to established standards.

I believe that the proposals advocated by the Committee and upon which the proposed legislation is based are founded solidly in fact and can stand up under the most critical form of analysis in the Congress. I believe that if this legislation is enacted it will result in a significant improvement in the retention rates, quality, and desired balance by skills of personnel of the Armed Forces, and thus contribute to the defense of the Nation.

Nothing For Retired

In translating the proposals of the Committee into legislation, the Department of Defense has deviated from specific Committee recommendations in the application of the proposed pay scales to personnel already retired. It is not felt that the pay of currently retired personnel should be converted to the step-in-grade system or that justification exists for changing current retired pay at this time. The proposed pay concepts are not based on changes in cost of living, nor do they represent pay increases except for merit and performance. Application of these scales to personnel now on the retired lists would provide disproportionate increases to some and no increases to others. Increased retired pay is not considered a part of the solution to the problem of developing and maintaining a quality work force balanced by skills.

The Department of Defense has further deviated from committee recommendations in the officer pay scales. This deviation is felt to more effectively align military pay with the compensation of other government employees. By revising the top level (O-10) downward, the senior military officers will receive $21,895 per annum (including pay, allowances, and the equivalent value of income tax exemption) compared to the $22,000 paid to Service Secretaries. Upward revision of the lower pay grades (O-2 through O-4) will relieve the numbers in this area who would be under "saved pay" under the committee scale.

In implementing the new compensation system, the Department of Defense proposes to phase into the step-in-grade system by catering all personnel into that step which would provide the minimum increase under the new rates. This procedure will reduce initial costs and will delay full costs until significant gains and savings accrue. This conversion plan will have little effect on the young man who will complete obligated service during the transition period as it does not change the pay to which he pay aspire. In the case of more senior officers and enlisted men, phased conversion will provide pay increases in increments rather than at one time and will not affect individual motivation to a major degree.

I feel that the cost of the proposed legislation is moderate compared to the ultimate costs which may be incurred, apart from decreased operational effectiveness if we do not now provide means for attracting and retaining in the Armed Forces the best-qualified men in the many and diverse skills required.

1 Jan. '58 Start

The Department will request that the effective date of the legislation be January 1, 1958. I wish to stress that if this date is approved, no additional appropriation to cover costs of this legislation for Fiscal Year 1958 will be requested by the Department of Defense. The costs thereof will be fully absorbed by the military departments within the limitations of the Defense budget already submitted to Congress.

This revised proposal has been worked out carefully in light of my recent discussions and communications with the President. It has been reviewed in detail by the Secretaries of the Military Departments, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Chiefs of Staff of the Army and Air Force, the Chief of Naval Operations and the Commandant of the Marine Corps. It is our unanimous opinion that this proposal is an essential step toward improving our balance of personnel skills and experience in the Armed Forces, and thus it will contribute directly to the defense of the Nation.

I would welcome an opportunity for representatives of the Department of Defense to meet with members of your staff on reviewing the proposed legislation and to furnish any additional data or information you may require.

Sincerely yours,
C. E. WILSON

"Inflationary"

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
BUREAU OF THE BUDGET
WASHINGTON, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

Your letter of March 20, 1957, transmitted a draft of proposed legislation to modernize the pay structure for the uniformed services based on the recommendations from the Defense Advisory Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation.

In my judgment, the President has made clear his view that only a portion of the recommendations of the Cordiner Committee with respect to the pay structure should be considered for adoption at this time. He has indicated that pay adjustments should be limited to those directly affecting the retention of the hard-to-train skilled personnel who have been leaving the services at an undesirable rate.

Key Point Stated

It would appear that the key point for retention of enlisted personnel with critical skills is at the expiration of the first enlistment. Therefore, it would seem that adjustments should be focused particularly at the point or that provisions for special compensation for selected persons thereafter might be appropriate. Similarly, the expiration of the period of obligated service would appear to be the point at which adjustments for officers ought to be focused. In addition, various administrative actions, as recommended by the Cordiner Committee, will contribute to improvements in controlled personnel retention, since pay adjustments are not the sole approach to solution of this important problem.

Proposals for general adjustments in levels of compensation for members of the uniformed services must be weighed against the importance at this time of avoiding any additional inflationary pressures. Accordingly, it is requested that your draft of proposed legislation be reviewed and resubmitted with the adjustments limited to the areas outlined above. Members of the staff of the Bureau of the Budget are available to meet with representatives of the Department to assist in any possible manner in bringing the Department's proposal into accord with the President's wishes.

Sincerely yours,
/s/ PERCIVAL BRUNDAGE
DIRECTOR

What's Ahead

Ft. Carson, Colo., and Ft. Sill, Okla., have been chosen as sites for the Army segment of the special SALUTE TO THE ARMED SERVICES which will be televised over NBC's "Wide World" 12 May in connection with Armed Forces Week.

William B. Franke, newly appointed Under Secretary of Navy, will be featured speaker 16 May at the LAUNCHING of the third nuclear powered submarine, Skate, at Groton, Conn. Mrs. Lewis L. Strauss, wife of the chairman of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, will christen the submarine.

Maj. Gen. Lee B. Washbourne, Assistant Chief of Staff, Installations, Hq. USAF, will be guest speaker at the 37th annual meeting of the SOCIETY OF AMERICAN MILITARY ENGINEERS 20 May. At the meeting, RADM. H. Arnold Karo, Director of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey will be installed as President of the Society, and Maj. Gen. Emerson C. Itschner, Army Chief of Engineers, will be installed as 1st Vice President.

The 10th annual reunion of the FIRST ARMORED DIVISION ASSOCIATION will be held at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia 23-24 Aug. Additional information can be obtained from Charles W. Pierce, Jr., of Lenni Mills, Pa.

All Navy Nurses, active and inactive, have been invited to attend a breakfast get-together to be held during the NATIONAL LEAGUE OF NURSING CONVENTION, 5 to 11 May, at Chicago, Ill. Tickets for the breakfast which will be at the Conrad Hilton Hotel at 8:00 A. M., on 8 May, may be purchased at the Convention ticket booth or at the Navy Nurse Corps exhibit. Capt. Leona Jackson, NC, USN, Director, Navy Nurse Corps, will attend.

THE 1ST CAVALRY DIVISION ASSOCIATION of the "First Team," which is still on active duty in Japan, will hold its 10th Annual Reunion at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, 30 Aug through 2 Sept. For reservations and information write to the president of the Chicago Chapter, Mr. John J. O'Connell, Jr., 1717 East 85th Street, Chicago 17, Ill., or to the Fiscal Agent and Registrar, Col. Edmund P. Stone, P. O. Box 201, Pomona, Calif. All ex-troopers whether members of this Association or not are welcome.

Atomic Plan

By its current action it now merges the two fields, lists the areas of employment involved, and provides for a system of long range forecasts of specialist personnel needs based upon five year projections on weapons and equipment either under development or on the horizon for future development.

This latest step is also related to the recent Army and Air Force Augmentation Act, which will greatly increase the number of Regular officers in these two services. A feature of this Act is a provision for the appointment of 200 scientifically trained officers in the Regular Army. Many of these officers will have graduate degrees, as well as practical experience in the specific fields of particular interest to the Army. These officers will become a part of the Research and Development Program.

The Army has been attempting to keep pace with requirements in the identification and projection of its Research and Development positions and personnel resources for some time. These positions are not confined to strictly Army activities. Numerous requirements for Army officers with specialized graduate education and training in the physical sciences have also developed in the Offices of the Secretary of Defense and of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; with the Atomic Energy Commission, and with various joint Service activities.

THE INCREASING IMPORTANCE of Research and Development to the Army and to the Department of Defense is reflected by the demand for officers with advanced degrees in such specialties as physics, nuclear engineering, nuclear chemistry, and electronic engineering. These all require long lead time for the selection and schooling of individuals, as well as being areas of national shortage. An adequate system for long range determination of such requirements was therefore imperative.

The Army believes that the five year projections of personnel requirements now being instituted will satisfy this need and permit the development of an adequate number of officer specialists in appropriate fields, to meet the requirements generated by new developments.

Estimates beyond a five year period are considered to be impracticable, since new discoveries may at any time upset planning for the procurement and special training of personnel.

Under the Army's new program, officers with the required backgrounds will be utilized as necessary whether or not they elect career specialization. However, for those who desire to enter the Program, and are accepted on the basis of demonstrated capacity, appropriate schooling, and overall performance of duty, a rewarding career is offered. These officers will begin a series of repetitive, progressively more important assignments to Research and Development activities. They will continue in their present branch affiliations, as Artillery, Ordnance, or other branch officers. They will perform duties specifically appropriate to these branches only at such times and for such periods as are determined to be necessary to maintain basic branch knowledge, permit development outside the limits inherent in specialization; and as necessary to produce a broadly qualified officer capable of making the greatest possible contribution in time of war.

Essentially the Army does not want its officers to be scientists. It needs highly trained Army officers who are capable of working on the same or higher level with civilian scientists, and who can recognize and exploit the military implications of research findings and talk the language of the scientist.

memo

SECDEF WILSON MUST BE CONFIDENT that he can win Budget Bureau approval for some kind of a military pay bill in time for Congressional action this year. He told his last news conference (The Journal 27 April) that he hoped to get a pay bill to Capitol Hill. THIS WAS AFTER he had received the letter from BoB Director Brundage (See Page 3) shooting down the SecDef's pay bill proposal. There's no question that Mr. Wilson is out on a limb, for the Services have been led to believe that he had obtained Administration clearance for the Cordiner Plan—at least for its more salient recommendations.

A SHARP INCREASE is ahead in Army missile training. The AAA and Guided Missile Center at Ft. Bliss, Tex., under Maj. Gen. Robert J. Wood, USA, which graduated 9000 students last year, has been directed to plan for 12,000 students this year. NEW CONSTRUCTION at Bliss will boost the value of the plant from $400 to $600 million.

BOMBING CONTESTS receive undisputed top attention in SAC, but two other types of competitions merit notice. SAC will award a donated $5000 Arnolt-Bristol sports car to the winner of a tube bending contest. A week at the luxurious Caribe Hilton Hotel in San Juan, P. R., will be given the winner of an SAC art contest.

ENOUGH RETIRED GENERALS to staff all the Army's divisions now reside in San Antonio, Tex. The recent retirement of Maj. Gen. Willard K. Liebel brought to 70 the number of Army retired generals living in that city.

THERE'S PERSISTENT TALK in Panama that the Army covets control of the Air Force's Albrook AFB. The Air Force has shifted some of its strength from the Canal Zone—there are no longer permanent fighter units assigned in Panama—and some in the Army think control of Albrook should be taken away from the Air Force.

AN UNUSUAL CONSTRUCTION JOB has just been completed by the 931st Engineer Group, for which it was specially cited. Under command of Col. William N. Beard, USA, this Army group converted an Air Force Base (Walters AFB, Tex.) which had no runways into an Air Base for the Army, installing four stage fields and 24 runways. (When the Air Force had the post it used it to train engineers; the Army is using it for its Primary Helicopter School.)

AN INTRIGUING PRESS RELEASE (185-57-JB) has just been issued at Strategic Air Command Headquarters, Offutt AFB, Nebr. It tells about plans to shift some SAC fighter wings to the Tactical Air Command, notes the ease of this transition, and comments that this "underscores the interrelation of the Air Force's two offensive air commands, which together are the most potent combination of air striking power the world has ever known." GREAT TRIBUTE IS PAID by SAC to TAC's versatility, including TAC's "substantial contribution to the strategic mission of the Air Force through the nuclear bombing capability of its aerial refueled lighter bombers which can reach critical airpower and transportation targets."

THE SAC PRAISE FOR TAC could be a happenstance; possibly it's a result of the recent interchange of information services officers between the two commands. NOT IMPLAUSIBLE also is the fact that SAC C-in-C General LeMay soon moves to the Pentagon to be the AF's Vice Cofs.

RETIRED SERVICEMEN WILL BE BITTER about SecDef Wilson's refusal to go along with the Cordiner Committee proposal to include retired persons in any new pay benefits voted the Armed Forces. Cordiner Committee members had wanted retired Service people to be given an option as to whether they preferred to be paid present rates or take advantage of any gains in new legislation. THAT'S THE WAY it normally has been done in the past.

HUGH DONALDSON AFB, S. C., home of the 18th Air Force, is slated for a shift from TAC to MATS, effective with the start of the new fiscal year on 1 July. MATS will take over TAC's C-124's, of which there are 10 squadrons of 16 planes each; 7 of the squadrons are based at Donaldson. AN EXCEPTION MAY BE MADE to permit retention by TAC of sufficient Douglas C-124 lift to complete missions to the North and South Poles, particularly the flights committed in support of the International Geophysical Year at Little America.

SOME CONGRESSIONAL IRE may be aroused over a proposal put forward by the Air Force. When Congress approved the law establishing the Air Force Academy, top AF leaders explained it would not be possible initially to appoint cadets under the same system used at West Point and Annapolis and asked for temporary authority to use another system. The House and Senate reluctantly agreed to a four-year interim plan. Now the Air Force says delay in completing the permanent Academy means the interim appointment program will have to be continued for an additional four years. Congress probably will go along, but not before considerable grumbling has been added to the record.

THE SERVICES HAVE BANNED all but emergency dental care for families at military installations in the U. S. Heretofore, many installations offered limited dental treatment, based on availability of dentists. ONE LIKELY EFFECT of the curtailed care will be to increase the load carried by Service dentists overseas.

IT WON'T LIKELY HAPPEN, but 82d Airborne Division troopers in Panama from Ft. Bragg, N. C., for Exercise Carib-Ex informally told newsmen "it would be quite an event, indeed," if the 82d was ever engaged in a maneuver exercise against the 101st airborne division at Ft. Campbell, Ky. The two divisions are hearty rivals. SPECULATION CONTINUES in the Army that Maj. Gen. William C. Westmoreland, USA, now Secretary of the Army General Staff—at 43 he is the Army's youngest two-star officer—is headed later this year for command of the 101st, with its present CG, Maj. Gen. Thomas C. Sherburne, USA, moving to another top assignment.

THE ARMY DOESN'T WANT to get rusty. Commanders are under orders in a new circular to make certain that effective corrosion control programs are established.

THE SERVICES ARE TAKING STEPS to make certain families are aware of opportunities to travel to and from overseas areas on commercial ships, as well as MSTs vessels. Families are advised that gratuities on commercial vessels are "relatively high." Another bit of advice: cost of transporting a dog from the U. S. to Europe on a commercial ship is $50; $10 for a cat. The cost to Japan is $100 for a dog and $15 for a cat.

Gen. Gavin Tells Limitations Problems

Army's concepts of future land combat envisage requirements for a greater range than this.
In answer to other questions, General Gavin said the Army feels "the real innovation in tactics" lies in development of a short takeoff or vertical takeoff plane under 50,000 pounds. He added, however, that "the current restrictions tend to inhibit exploration" in this field.
He said the Army has in its grasp "technical possibilities of tremendous mobility for the purpose of land combat; flying very close to the ground, vertical takeoff aircraft, matched with atomic firepower. We want to see this exploited. We feel that putting a precise number on weight inhibits that exploration. This is our concern at the moment."
The present 5,000 pound limitation on fixed wing aircraft "could be somewhat damaging" in time, he said.
In response to a request from Representative Robert L. F. Sikes (D-Fla.), General Gavin submitted a statement embodying the "principal problems" which have arisen in the Army as a result of the Defense Department directive.
Here is the complete statement:
"In reply to your question as to the impact of limitations imposed on Army research and development in the fields of aircraft and missiles by Secretary Wilson's memorandum of November 26, 1956, I can make only general statements at this time. The provisions of the memorandum have been in effect for just over 2 months. It is too early therefore to see what specific problems it will cause.
"It is my opinion that the memorandum was a reasonable one when viewed in the light of the then existing circumstances. We have three aggressive military departments each dedicated to serving the Nation. Each is highly competent in its field and as might be expected, in areas where mutual interests of the services approach each other or overlap there is a strong spirit of competition. Secretary Wilson's memorandum has done much to direct this competition and the services' energies into the most profitable channels from the national point of view.
"THE WEIGHT LIMITATIONS on Army aircraft, if strictly applied, will unquestionably prevent the Army from developing the aircraft necessary for fulfillment of its mission. To quote one example, the Army must have integral aircraft capable of moving reasonable numbers of men or quantities of material within the combat zone. The requirements for this sort of transport are such that they cannot be economically fulfilled with fixed-wing aircraft weighing less than 5,000 pounds empty. Strict interpretation of the directive will therefore force the Army to perform these tasks with helicopters. In any given payload class a helicopter generally costs at least twice as much as an airplane initially, and five times as much to maintain. The Army has further indications that the heavier categories of conventional helicopters, that is above 3 tons payload, will be extremely difficult to maintain at any cost under field conditions. The Army has therefore felt it essential to supplement helicopters to the maximum extent possible with short takeoff and landing and vertical takeoff and landing airplanes and has pioneered research in airplanes of this type to make this possible.
"The Army must continue this developmental program to meet these requirements, regardless of weight limitations, when there is reasonable expectation that the requirements will justify an exception to the limitations as provided for in Secretary Wilson's memorandum. Although Secretary Wilson has specifically provided for exceptions to the weight limitation, the mere fact that the limitation has been stated is bound to have caused considerable doubt and misunderstanding within the aircraft industry. Industry is not likely to expend effort in areas in which there are doubts as to whether projects will be carried to completion. I have already sensed a decreasing interest in the Army and its aviation problems within industry. The net effect, as I evaluate it, will be that the exchange of ideas between Army and industry will tend to be stultified. This leads logically to the conclusion that the Army will progress more slowly than it should because progress is based on ideas.

"WITH REGARD TO MISSILES, the 100-mile horizontal range limitation on surface-to-air missiles poses no major problem at this time. Secretary Wilson has pointed out that this limitation is based upon the present state of the art. It is to be inferred from this that the limitation will be reconsidered when justified by advances in the state of the art.
"As I approach a discussion of the surface-to-air missile limitations I must state that the future of our Army lies in innovation which will give us, not a better World War II Army, but an Army which reflects the full capacity of American science and industry. The areas which offer the greatest possibilities of innovation are firepower and mobility. The two are intimately interrelated. As mobility, both surface and air, increases, the range of supporting weapons must increase. Our concepts of future land combat envisage requirements for firepower to be delivered beyond the 200-mile missile system.
"IN SUMMARY, I repeat that Secretary Wilson's memorandum has provided much-needed direction to the three services. While it is too early to evaluate its effects with any degree of validity, I must point out that the Army is wholeheartedly complying with it in both spirit and intent."

Aviation Survey Team Visits 10th Division

A four-man aviation survey team headed by Brig. Gen. Gerald F. Lillard, USA, Commanding General of the 7th Army Artillery, recently met with 10th Division officials at Wuerzburg, Germany, to discuss 7th Army supply and maintenance problems.
The group, whose mission is to evaluate supply and maintenance procedures and operations within the 7th Army to insure it keeping pace with increased air activity throughout the command, includes Col. Kenneth R. G. Dyer, VII Corps; Col. Dale Mean, 8th Div., and Col. Paul Ritchie, 2d Armored Div.
Discussed at the conference were such topics as adequacy of equipment and facilities, availability of trained personnel and effectiveness of present supply and maintenance organization in relation to 10th Div. and 7th Army aircraft.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

Fairchild Building 4-Engine Turboprop Transport To Replace C-119 and C-123

Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation has disclosed that a go-ahead had been given for prototype production of a four-engine turboprop transport to be known as the Turboboxcar.

R. S. Boutelle, Fairchild President, said the new plane will fly in mid-1958, after a meeting with S. B. Withington, President of Locomotive Division of AVCO, and Anselm Franz, Locomotive Vice President, at which agreement was reached for delivery of the new Locomotive T-55 engines early in 1958.

"Engineering of the new airplane has paralleled development of the T-55, and this will permit a transition economical to the government and make possible early delivery of production airplanes to the military services," Boutelle said.

"The Turboboxcar will have a take-off gross weight of 75,000 pounds and carry 32,181 pounds of cargo over short ranges and 21,439 pounds at its maximum range of 1,500 miles," Boutelle said. It will be a rugged airplane designed as a successor to the C-119 Flying Boxcar and the C-123 assault transport, of which more than 1,400 have been built for the military services.

With boundary layer control, the Turboboxcar will be able to operate from small fields and from the decks of aircraft carriers for on-board delivery service. The Turboboxcar will have a pressurized cockpit for operations at altitudes up to 25,000 feet. Cruising speed will be 216 knots. Normal take-off distance is 2,240 feet, landing 2,050 feet, over a 50-foot obstacle. With boundary layer control these distances will be 1,750 feet for take-off, 1,610 feet landing.

The new Locomotive T-55 turboprop engine, which was developed under Army and Air Force sponsorship, provides 1,600 equivalent horsepower in its original production version, with a considerable growth potential. It will be certified for civilian operation.

"Feet First" Supersonic Ejection Seat Will Be Tested on USAF's Rocket Sleds

A new "aerial bobsled" ejection seat for supersonic "century series" jet aircraft is being developed by the Industry Crew Escape System Committee, and full-scale models soon will be tested exhaustively at Air Force rocket sled tracks at Edwards AFB, Calif., and Hurricane Mesa, in Southern Utah.

The new seat, which projects the pilot feet-first and on his back into the supersonic airstream, is aerodynamically shaped and equipped with stabilizing fins. In the supine position the new seat strikingly resembles a bobsled. Wind tunnel and slingshot tests with dynamically scaled miniature models have indicated the seat will have stable flight characteristics, engineers report.

The ICESC bobsled, or "B," seat is one of two main configurations under development and study. The other, designated the "A" seat by ICESC, is an upward ejection version of the forward-facing skip flow generator seat developed for downward pilot escape under the ICESC program. Both seat configurations are still subject to refinement and change as the windblast and ejection tests progress.

The ICESC has recommended that both seat configurations be developed through sled test phase. Final evaluation and review of the Air Force supersonic escape system development program is scheduled for Fall.

Thirteen major aircraft companies and subcontractors are actively participating in the multi-million-dollar pilot escape system development program. Convair Division of General Dynamics Corporation was assigned by the Air Force Air Research and Development Command to coordinate industry-wide development of a standard upward pilot escape system for supersonic aircraft. Lockheed Aircraft Corporation was assigned parallel responsibility for development of a downward escape system.

Rotation of the seat and pilot 90 degrees into the supine position before separation of the seat from the cockpit is one of the distinguishing features of the "B" seat.

Another seat, developed under the ICESC downward ejection program directed by Lockheed, also is being actively considered for application to upward ejection pilot escape. This configuration ejects the pilot in an upright and forward-facing position. A flat wind deflector, suspended low in front of the seat, either by arms mounted to the seat sides or fastened to the end of a telescoping tube in the seat base, creates a shock wave in front of the supersonic seat. This shock wave envelope insulates the pilot from the supersonic windstream blast as the seat is separated from the aircraft and rocketed clear.

Limited quantities of both seat configurations were built under ICESC subcontract by Stanley Aviation Corporation, Denver, Colo., for use in sled testing.

Models of both "A" and "B" seats have been tested extensively in wind tunnels and both have demonstrated stability characteristics superior to present-day ejection seats, engineers report.

Among the aircraft companies and subcontractors represented on the ICESC or sitting in on the development program as observers are Aircraft Mechanics, Inc., Colorado Springs, Colo.; Boeing Airplane Company, Washington and Kansas; Chance Vought Aircraft, Inc., Dallas, Tex.; Coleman Engineering Company, Los Angeles; Cook Research Laboratories, Los Angeles; Douglas Aircraft Company at El Segundo, Long Beach and Santa Monica; Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation, Long Island, N. Y.; Lockheed; The Martin Company, Baltimore, Md.; McDonnell Aircraft Corporation, St. Louis, Mo.; North American Aviation, Inc., Los Angeles and Ohio; Northrop Aircraft, Inc., Hawthorne, Calif.; Republic Aviation Corporation, Long Island, N. Y.; Stanley Aviation Corporation; Talco Engineering Company, Hamden, Conn.; Temco Aircraft Corporation, Dallas, Tex.; Weber Aircraft Corporation, Burbank, Calif., and Convair (San Diego and Fort Worth).

Retired Pay Peril

The case (see THE JOURNAL, 27 April) involves a retired Navy commander who completed almost 30 years' service in the enlisted, warrant officer and officer ranks. Shortly after his retirement, he became involved in an incident which resulted in the death of another man and in the commander's conviction on a manslaughter charge. He was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

The Navy advised the convicted officer that action was being taken to drop him from the retired rolls. He was informed that, as an alternative, he could resign under conditions other than honorable and thereby forfeit all benefits, including his retired pay.

The officer's wife appealed to Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee in an attempt to save the retirement benefits which her husband had earned during his long years of honorable service in the Navy.

The Committee's Chief Counsel, Col. Robert W. Smart, USAFR, has posed a number of questions about the case in a letter to VADM. James L. Holloway, Jr., USN, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Personnel.

"It seems to me that this particular case is part of a much broader problem, some aspects of which are currently before the Congress," Colonel Smart advised the Navy.

He noted that the House Committee on Veterans Affairs, in a recent report touching on a similar problem, has expressed the opinion that to cut off retired pay in such circumstances would be to impose an additional penalty.

He also pointed out that the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service has the question under consideration.

"As you know," Colonel Smart stated, "it has been the consistent position of the military departments, which position has been endorsed by the Congress, that retired pay in the military services is earned retirement and not a gratuity, even though the retirement beneficiary makes no contributions."

In this connection, he asked:

"If military retirement is deemed to be earned, and not a gratuity, it is considered to be a mandatory policy that persons in a retired status convicted of felony offenses be dropped from the rolls or required to tender their resignation?"

"While I do not question the propriety of suspending the payment of earned retirement benefits during a limited but substantial period of confinement as the result of a conviction for a felony offense," he continued, "I cannot help but wonder whether or not it might be proper to consider the payment of a portion of such earned retirement benefits to the innocent members of the family of the person so convicted. I would sincerely appreciate receiving your reaction on this point."

On about the same date that this letter was posted from the Committee to the Department of the Navy, the wife of the convicted officer was notified that the Navy had completed action dropping her husband from the retired rolls.

The Navy's re-study of the case is now underway and the reply which is submitted to the House Armed Services Committee will be reported in a future issue of THE JOURNAL.

Duties Of MDW Range From Top Level Ceremonies To Arctic Tests In Canada

(The Military District of Washington observes the fifteenth anniversary of its establishment on 5 May. In view of its uniqueness among Service commands and the important part it plays in Washington life, THE JOURNAL is pleased to present the following article on its activities.)

By Maj. Gen. John G. Van Houten, USA, Commanding The Military District of Washington

THE Military District of Washington was created within the territorial jurisdiction of the Second Army Command, although its chief obligations lie elsewhere. Set up as a separate cog, distinct from the meshing machinery of the Continental Command's six armies, it was primarily designed to carry out various tasks peculiar to the Nation's Capital.

Maj. Gen. Van Houten

And just as Washington, D.C. includes a number of wheels within its perimeter, each with its pattern of streets, radiating spoke-like from a central, vital hub, the Military District of Washington bears a similarity in its makeup. While many spokes of its wheels are like those of the six Army commands, its framework is further bolstered by additional spokes whose functions are without parallel elsewhere in the Army.

Continental Army commanders are generally responsible for operations, training, administration, services and supply of all units, activities and installations within their commands. They maintain recruiting stations for the Army and Air Force, reception centers for inductees and separation centers for those who have completed their military obligations.

They furnish assistance in civil disasters, formulate plans for internal defense and cooperate closely with Civil Defense agencies in training the general public to protect itself in emergencies.

THE MILITARY DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON faithfully duplicates all those functions—or spokes—except that it maintains no reception center or any responsibility for Reserve affairs. However, it pursues a vigorous program to obtain enlistees in the Regular Army, and it coordinates this understanding and its own Civil Defense plans with Second Army headquarters at Ft. George G. Meade, Md.

Headquarters of MDW are currently located in a sprawling, many-winged prefabricated structure at Gravelly Point, Va., directly opposite Washington's National Airport. Geographically, it embraces an area which includes the city of Alexandria, Va., and the Virginia counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Prince William, Stafford, King George and Westmoreland; the Maryland counties of Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys; and, of course, the District of Columbia—a total area of approximately 2,800 square miles.

Devolving upon the Military District of Washington are myriad responsibilities not incurred by other Army commands—largely because of its proximity to Department of Defense headquarters in the Pentagon and to the pulsing heart of our national government in Washington, D. C. The Pentagon and the city of Washington are, in fact, only parts of the area administered by the Military District of Washington.

For example, the Military District of Washington plans and executes ceremonies accorded distinguished visitors like King Saud of Saudi Arabia, who recently arrived in Washington for a series of gravely important conferences with Government officials.

AN UNDERTAKING of that nature is complicated and arduous, requiring many hours of conferences and reams of directives and charts. It demands split-second timing and control. The gun salutes, fired at prescribed intervals, lose their effectiveness if fired too soon or too late. Security measures, control of traffic and spectators and the unexpected incidents that always occur at functions of this type multiply the difficulties of successful execution.

The Military District of Washington cooperates in the management of the gigantic Pentagon—not only for the Army but for its sister services as well. It is responsible for overall security within the building, and it supervises joint-service responsibilities such as receptions for visitors, maintenance of an information bureau and parking facilities for the automobiles of some 30,000 workers who commute there daily.

Two more of its activities, also operated on a large scale at the Pentagon, are the Armed Forces Service Center and the United States Army Motor Center.

THE ARMED FORCES SERVICE CENTER is a particularly complex and specialized organization. It assists military personnel in travel, baggage control, dependent housing, reservations, passports and insurance. A nearby Military District of Washington installation—Cameron Station—packs, crates and ships most of the household goods belonging to a serviceman on orders—regardless of whether he is assigned locally or to any one of our Nation's many far-flung military bases.

THE UNITED STATES ARMY MOTOR CENTER provides transportation around the clock for Department of the Army, high ranking military and civilian personnel and other agencies. Its thousands of passengers, who hold extremely diverse job assignments, represent the numerous scattered government buildings and military installations within the District.

During the Korean conflict there were as many as eight Congressional Medal of Honor groups in Washington in a single year, consisting of 27 recipients and innumerable guests. The MDW made all the pertinent arrangements, including travel accommodations, hotel reservations, entertainment, rehearsals for the ceremonies, suitable floral displays, limousines and seating facilities.

Among the most generally publicized subjects anywhere are Arlington National Cemetery and The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the 3d Infantry Regiment and The United States Army Band. All of them are under the jurisdiction of the Military District of Washington, and they have been brought to the public's attention at one time or another in most of the world's news media.

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, the best known of all our military cemeteries and one of our most inspiring shrines, includes the remains of heroes of all our wars—from the Revolution to the Korean conflict. An anonymous representative of all our dead lies in The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier; and laying a wreath there has become a national and international custom whenever statesmen and members of royalty visit Washington.

THE 3D INFANTRY REGIMENT antedates our Constitution. Battle flags of the 3d have flown valiantly in virtually every war in which the Nation has been involved. On the Regiment's rolls are the names of men who fought at Valley Forge, Fredericksburg, San Juan Hill, Verdun, Guadalcanal and the Yalu River.

It is an elite, proud outfit, composed of hand-picked officers and men. It furnishes military escorts for such important functions as inaugurations, state funerals, parades and official arrivals and departures of top ranking dignitaries. Among its most honored responsibilities is guarding The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier; and sentinels who measure their conduct by an exacting military yardstick continue to impress thousands of pilgrims there.

THE UNITED STATES ARMY BAND is the Army's representative musical organization, activated by General John J. Pershing when he was Chief of Staff in 1922. Seven years later it rose to international prominence when it represented the United States Government officially at the Ibero-American Exposition at Seville, Spain. During World War II it entertained American and Allied troops and civilians with more than 500 performances in 17 overseas countries. The Band's open-air concerts at the Watergate and the Capitol, and its "Freedom Sings" winter concerts, featuring internationally famous guest stars, have entranced music lovers for many years. The programs are broadcast over a nationwide radio hookup.

The National War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces are top level schools in the Military District of Washington. Directed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, they prepare senior officers of all services for command and staff duties in the highest echelons of the Armed Forces.

Several of MDW's functions, however, reach out beyond its geographical limits. It has court-martial jurisdiction over all attaches and their staffs wherever they represent the U. S. Army. And it has direct control over the U. S. Army's First Arctic Test Center located at Ft. Churchill, Manitoba, Canada—a joint Arctic testing post for the Canadian and U. S. armed services.

THE OVAL PATCH worn on the left shoulder by personnel assigned here perhaps is best emblematic of the Military District of Washington and the complete integration of its many diversified units. It is comprised of a double-edged sword—symbolizing protection—diagonally superimposed over the Washington Monument. Various colors in the design represent the Infantry, Field Artillery, Engineers, Cavalry, Military Police, Navy and Marine Corps.

It is displayed with pride by those who wear it, and as long as there is need it will continue to symbolize the meaning and purpose of the Military District of Washington.

Marshal Montgomery Views Future

From first page—
our thoughts some ten years ahead.
Why "ten years?"

Because when you start crystal gazing, ten years ahead is about as far as you can see with any certainty.

A factor that must influence our thinking, and our planning for the future, is scientific progress.

We cannot look into the future with certainty, but we know enough to be able to make reasonable assumptions on which we can work. Scientific progress will be great during the next ten years. It will entail such radical changes in military thinking that we have all too little time to agree upon our aims. Having decided what we want, we must then give the necessary direction for scientific research, design, trial and experiment, production, distribution and training. And if materials are in short supply, or finance is a ruling factor, we will have to decide on relative priorities.

What can we expect to have in ten years' time?

Operational and in use by 1966

- Naval ships, including submarines, with nuclear power.
- Nuclear warheads for any suitable weapons, certainly down to and including field guns.
- Strategic missiles fitted with nuclear warheads. The expense and lack of accuracy of ballistic missiles make them unsuitable vehicles for less powerful explosives.
- In some weapon systems, guns will have begun to be replaced by missiles and rockets e. g. anti-tank and anti-aircraft.

• Short range guided missiles, with ranges up to 500 miles, will be available in quantity.

• Intermediate range ballistic missiles, with ranges up to 2,000 miles, will be available and operational—from fixed positions on land and from ships.

• Man-made satellites will circle the earth.

• Improved submarine detection systems will be available.

In the development stage by 1966

• Inter-continental ballistic missiles, with ranges of up to 5,000 miles or more. These will exist, but will be mainly in the prototype stage. Long range attack will still be largely dependent on piloted aircraft.

• Nuclear powered aircraft. These will help to solve the logistic problems of airborne early warning i.e. we shall be able to get our radar stations up into the air.

• I am less hopeful of nuclear power for land vehicles. It is all a matter of priorities.

These scientific advances will have a marked effect on the organization of armed forces.

The development and integration of new weapons will be evolutionary rather than revolutionary. Older weapons will continue to be used alongside the new—oil with nuclear power, guns with missiles, medium range aircraft with medium range missiles, and so on. Operational weapons systems developed by some nations, such as the U.S.A., will be in advance of that of other nations. However, all must have these new weapons to a greater or less degree, in accordance with their needs as part of one combined force.

Air and missiles for offense

The air and missile arm will largely take over the role of providing the offensive punch in nuclear war. Defense against this will be difficult and surprise will be easy to obtain. On the other hand, such weapons will give increased power to the strategic defensive in the land battle.

Looking into the far future, the advent of missiles will cause a reduction in the number and importance of piloted aircraft. There will always be a need for efficient strategic air forces to provide flexibility and to locate interior targets in enemy territory. Piloted aircraft will definitely be needed for limited and cold war activities, and for what are known as "police actions."

As the effectiveness of air defense by missiles increases, so the number of aircraft required for interception tasks will be reduced.

Armies need air mobility

Armies, having more fire power and primarily a defensive role in unlimited nuclear war, will not be as large in size as we have seen them in past wars. The strategic mobility of important elements must be increased by providing facilities for rapid movement by air.

The close support role of tactical air forces (as we knew it in the late war, and today) will have declined by 50%, being replaced by nuclear weapons in the hands of the land forces.

Navies will have increased mobility, and increased offensive potential. They will be less dependent on shore bases, which can so easily be destroyed.

All these scientific developments will lead to radical changes in military thinking—or should do. We must be sure that we make the right deductions when we peer into the future.

Weapons outstrip strategy

Weapons usually outstrip strategy and tactics; today the gap is wider than ever before. Two points are fundamental:

- 1) In no nation are the financial, scientific and manpower resources such that the nation can, by itself alone, achieve the state of security and readiness which modern conditions demand. With its allies, and particularly its NATO allies, anything is possible. Joint defense within the Western Alliance is the answer to most of the financial and industrial problems.

- 2) It follows that we need, first, a clearer definition than we have today of our long-term strategic posture—and secondly, a very genuine and wholehearted scientific give-and-take between the Western Allies, all pooling their knowledge and resources.

There is sometimes a tendency to think that missiles will solve all our problems. This is not the case. There are many troublesome problems connected with missiles. Here are a few.

Some of the present day guided missiles are slow and can be intercepted. Their guidance systems can be jammed, and on this account their accuracy decreases quickly as the range increases. They are not therefore good long range offensive weapons. The ballistic missile is not accurate. Within the next ten years the intermediate range missile is likely to have an average error of at least  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 1 mile. For real accuracy we will rely on piloted aircraft for many years.

Today we have no defense against ballistic missiles. It will come, but not just yet. We know what we want but it may take the scientist some years to give it to us.

I mention these problems in order to bring our thoughts about missiles down from the clouds above which they will travel. Of course we must also bring our thoughts out of the clouds in many other respects.

Against this general background, we have been trying in this exercise to design the military "blue print" for a period some ten years from now.

We must decide now what we want, and then work gradually towards that goal—keeping in the closest touch with scientific progress and development.

We Service Chiefs can do our part, provided we can get political agreement within the Alliance.

2200 MILES IN L-19

The longest international cross-country training flight ever logged in the 10th Division was completed recently in Europe.

Lt. John McGarity, USA, 25th FA Bn., and Lt. David Young, USA, Co. C 85th Inf., arrived back at Bamberg, Germany, after flying more than 2200 miles in a Cessna L-19. The flight, which took 21 air hours, included stops in three countries, Germany, France and Italy.

ARMY AVIATION ROYALTY — Miss Margene Faggard, dark-eyed college coed from Poteet, Tex., is officially crowned "Queen of Army Aviation" by Col. Jules E. Gonseth, Jr., USA, commander of the Army Aviation training detachment at Camp Gary. Looking on is Lt. Richard C. Malinowski, USA, who escorted Miss Faggard, at the Fiesta De San Jacinto in San Antonio, April 22-27.

gineer troops in the United States during peacetime.

Many official visitors from Fourth Army headquarters, Department of the Army, and Continental Army Command attended the ceremonies as well as civil leaders and distinguished persons in communities throughout Texas.

Also present for the ceremonies were Mr. Harvey Gaylord, president of the Bell Helicopter Co., Ft. Worth, Tex., and Mr. Stanley Hiller, president of Hiller Helicopters, Palo Alto, Calif. Hiller helicopters, the H-23, are used in the primary training phase, while at Ft. Rucker the men will fly Bell H-13s.

The sharp attrition in the class was attributed to the rigid physical requirements, lack of flying aptitude, and high scholastic requirements.

The 20-week school for officers, warrant officers, and warrant officer candidates is divided into two phases. Phase I, four weeks, is of the officer candidate school type, with emphasis placed on military bearing, physical fitness and training, and leadership.

The 16-week Phase II is taught almost exclusively by Southern Airways Company instructors. Subjects include weather instruction, radio communications, aerodynamics, maintenance, and flying safety.

While Phase I is exclusively for enlisted men in the School, Phase II is for officers below captain, warrant officers, and enlisted men.

Phase III, the advanced course, is taught at Fort Rucker, Ala., at The Army Aviation School, commanded by Brig. Gen. Carl I. Hutton, USA. Enlisted men graduating from Phase III are appointed warrant officers.

Sixty civilians are employed by the contractor, Southern Airways Company, as flight instructors. Mr. Raymond L. Thomas, is Southern's General Manager of its operation at Wolters. Southern's contract began the first of the year and will continue through 30 June at a contract price of $890,215. Negotiations are now under way for a renewal of the contract.

Col. Chester H. Meek, USA, is Colonel Inskeep's Deputy Post Commander, and Col. Wayne E. Downing, USA, is Assistant Commandant of the Helicopter School.

A new $2,200,000 100-bed Hospital has recently been completed on the post. It is commanded by Col. Herbert D. Edger and is the first Army hospital to have a section designed and equipped exclusively for aviation medicine. Under the direction of Lt. Col. Richard B. Austin, III, Chief of Aviation Medicine, the section works in close cooperation with the School.

Following this first class a new class will be graduated and sent on to the Army aviation school at Ft. Rucker each four weeks.

Members of the first class are:
CWO Robert E. Heltterbran.

TAC Planes To MATS

Transfer of heavy transport groups of the Tactical Air Command to operational control of the Military Air Transport Service as part of its new Single Manager functions has been ordered into effect on 1 July.

Also effective on that date will be the transfer of a number of Navy four-engine transports to MATS control. Industrial funding for MATS, under the Single Manager concept, will go into effect on 1 July also.

The new MATS units and their aircraft will remain at their present bases, but will be controlled from MATS Headquarters.

8-Inch A-Gun

The Defense Department on 1 May, in response to queries from newsmen, said that "the United States has an eight-inch atomic artillery shell."

Nothing else was announced officially. However, it has been frequently reported in the past that the Army was capable of firing an eight-inch nuclear shell.

Nuclear Navy

said, will enable the Navy to maintain its present force of 675,000 men through 30 June 1958.

It also will provide for an operating force of about 980 active ships, including 15 attack carriers, and about 9700 operating aircraft.

Procurement funds included in the budget "will purchase approximately 1200 new aircraft of the types most essential to our operating program," he said. "About two-thirds of these will be high-performance, jet-carrier aircraft of fighter and attack design. The remainder will consist of over 250 jet trainers, carrier airborne early warning aircraft, helicopters for the Marine Corps, and a small number of experimental aircraft for evaluation."

Missiles will be another "area of major procurement," he said, marking "a substantial increase over the current fiscal year." Admiral Burke said the missile program "will emphasize readiness by the procurement of air-defense missiles: the Sparrow and the Sidewinder for air to air, the Terrier and Talos for surface to air, and a small number of surface-to-air Tartars for evaluation."

Procurement plans, as previously reported in THE JOURNAL, also call for the construction of 19 new ships (including a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier), and 12 conversions.
